

THE PARABLE OF THE HUSBANDMAN

Behold, a husbandman did invest himself in a promise of vast return. But being common man with little understanding, he did take unto himself a wife as a partner with him, and their promised rewards exceeded imagination, for their third partner was wise and loving.

And then, at midday, came others and a cry went forth "Alas, open to us, let us join in thy good fortune", and they were invited in to sup with them; and they too took the Lord Jesus Christ as their partner, just as their friends had so wisely done before; and while others slept and slumbered, they did join their hands with God, and they did love and serve the Savior with all their hearts; insomuch that they did invest all their living into keeping the covenants and commandments of the Lord; and thus did they endure in faith to the very end.

Yea, behold, I say unto you that all they who do follow the example of the Lord Jesus Christ, will one day hear the King of heaven say unto them: "Come, ye blessed of the Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

He who has ears to hear, let him understand.
